Hair loss and Alopecia Areata

Effective treatment from the root
by Homeopathy

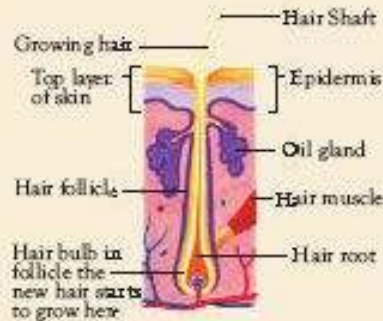

Understanding Hair loss and Alopecia Areata

The average human scalp contains about 100,000 hair strands and roughly about 20 to 100 hair are lost from it everyday. Each individual hair survives for an average of 4-5 years and during this period it grows about half an inch per month after which the hair falls out and is replaced by a new one in about 6-8 months. Hair loss becomes visible especially when the hair that fall out are not replaced adequately with new ones during the expected time period.

Hair loss may be patchy (alopecia) or diffuse (all over the scalp) in nature. As age progresses, men as well as women tend to lose the thickness of hair and the amount of hair.

Hair loss is a medical disorder but often ends into a social concern, as it affects look and self-esteem of the individual

Structure of human skin and hair

When is Hairloss of concern?

If the hair loss is above 100 strands daily or if one observes sudden increase of hair falling even within the normal range, it calls for medical attention and evaluation. Again, if one has hair falling within normal range but if they fall from the roots amounting to a definite reduction in the quantum of the total hair on the scalp, it calls for appropriate treatment.

What is Alopecia Arcata?

Localized, patchy hair loss on the scalp or on the beard or chest is called Alopecia areata. If it is extensive, extending to all the hairy parts of skin such as eyebrows, eyelashes, moustache, armpits, pubic hair, etc., it is labeled as Alopecia Universalis.

Causes of Hair loss:

Hair loss may be caused due to one or more of the following reasons: 1. Nutritional deficiencies (anemia, protein deficiency, zinc deficiency) 2. Hormonal imbalance (e.g. hypothyroid, menopause) 3. Stress 4. Certain drugs (beta blockers, chemotherapy, anti cholesterol drugs) 5. Local scalp diseases (e.g. Psoriasis, Lichen planus) 6. Certain acute illnesses (Viral infection, Typhoid) 7. Systemic disorders (Liver disease, kidney failure) 8. Genetic factors 9. Unknown factors

Male pattern baldness tends to be genetic in nature and is associated with high levels of circulating testosterone hormone which gets converted to dehydrotestosterone (DHT), which binds the root of the hair follicle, triggering hair loss.

Alopecia areata in particular is considered to be an auto-immune condition in which the immune system mistakenly attacks the hair follicles and destroys them, resulting in loss of hair in the affected area.

Homeopathic treatment for Hair loss and Alopecia areata:

Homeopathy believes in treating the underlying causes of hair loss by administering internal medicines. Use of hair tonics, shampoos and medicated oils do not form a part of the homeopathic treatment.

The treatment is targeted towards the root cause of the illness which corrects the internal problems hence controlling hair loss as well as enhancing hair growth. The medicines are 100% safe for all ages as well as during pregnancy; and they do not interfere with other medications.

How medicines are selected?

Homeopathic medicines are individually selected on the basis of patient's hair loss pattern, stress factors, lifestyle, personality, food habits, emotional make-up, personal and family history. Since the study encompasses all aspects of the constitution, it is often called constitutional treatment.

Why Homeopathy for Hair loss / Alopecia areata?

- No local applications or steroids
- It works positively / has immuno-modulatory action
- Safe
- Deeper level healing, enhancing body's inherent healing processes
- Long lasting or permanent recovery

About Homeopathic Medicines:

The homeopathic medicines are largely sourced from herbal extracts, minerals, refined chemicals, specially processed animal products, etc. The ultra minute doses of homeopathic medicines do not contain any of the original drug substance but only the therapeutic power, hence they are completely safe and non-toxic for all ages.

Some of the commonly used homeopathic medicines for Hair loss and Alopecia areata are Baryta carbonicum, Natrum muriaticum, Silicea, Phosphorous, Lycopodium clavatum, Nitric acidum, Sepia, etc. (There are over 200 possibilities.)

Scope of homeopathic treatment:

Diffuse hair loss and Alopecia Areata find excellent results with homeopathy.

It must be noted that Male / Female Pattern Baldness (MPB and FPB) cannot be cured or reverted back. It can only be controlled to some extent. We, at Life Force, do not strongly recommend treatment for MPB or FPB. If there has been scarring of the scalp due to some skin disease (Lichen Planus) leading to hair loss, such cases cannot be helped with homeopathy.

What is not treatable with homeopathy?

- Male and Female Pattern Baldness
- Scarred scalp
- Alopecia Universalis

How much time does homeopathic treatment take to cure Hair loss / Alopecia areata?

Those who may be losing 10 to 800 hair per day can expect 70 to 90% improvement in 8 to 16 weeks, in most cases. Improvement is observed usually after eight weeks. Some of the obstinate and extensive cases of Alopecia Areata may require longer course of treatment, may be for 10 to 20 months.

Depending on the duration of the disease, cause, severity and its governing factors, it may take about 1 to 3 months to see appreciable changes and about 4 to 18 months to cure it. Some cases may take longer.

Testimonials:

My hair fall was like crazy! Nothing less than 200 hair daily. I used to collect them in a plastic bag. I was desperate. I was suggested to consult Dr. Shah online. It took about 8 weeks to see changes. Now, hair loss has almost stopped. I may be losing, may be 20 hair a day, which is normal. I can suggest homeopathy to any one, without hesitation.

- Tej Pooj, NY, USA

Treatment was very good. Compared to what I had come here with, my condition today is very good. My alopecia patch had come so fast. When I came here I thought it will take a year to get my hair back to normal but within 6 months I have 3 inch hair all over my patch.

- U. Patel, Bangkok, Thailand

I was at first alarmed to see my daughter developing alopecia patches so rapidly and extensively all over her scalp. I was afraid that she would become completely bald and would never get her hair back. But thanks to Dr Shah and his medicines, today she has good length of hair all over her scalp and no bald patches anymore. Indeed I feel very lucky to have opted for Homeopathy at the right time.
